 EDITORIAL: BOARDMAN CHEATS TO WIN POSTAL DIPLOMACY GAME!!! (1764c)

Over a year ago I was told that Boardman, John was playing two positions in a diplomacy game. At the time I just could not believe that any man, no matter how low his character, could be a part to such a fraud.

A few months ago I discovered that letters from a (so called) Eric Blake and other letters by said infamous John Boardman were typed on the same typewriter. Worse yet the addresses and style were identical like carbon copies.

Not wanting to be guilty of character assassination I did not care to cast the first stone. Well others have cast it and John Boardman has admitted to this dishonorable act in Graustark #130, dated 3 June 1967.

So John Boardman's fake WIN is declared null & void. He will find it hard to play in another Diplomacy since I'm sure. He has found it very difficult to find top players willing to play in his 'game' of dirt, lies, & filth. - We do pity you John as you must be a very desperate man to win a game this way. -The Shame!
